The power of "wow": This November, you'll meet Positive Psychology Detective Jennifer Stellar who will illuminate how truly awe-inspiring experiences may mean more than we realize for our physical and mental health. Learn more: <http://tedmed.com/speakers/show?id=526368>

“Rather than seeing a walk through the park or a trip to the museum as an indulgence, we hope people will view these kind of experiences as important ways to promote a healthy body in addition to a healthy mind.”

-Jennifer Stellar

Suzie Brown writes songs to process her life. For a singer-songwriter, it's not so unusual, but she's also a cardiologist, used to being stoic and avoiding her own vulnerability at work. Her 2011 debut album Heartstrings has been featured at Starbucks, The Gap and Anthropologie and her second album, Almost There, was entirely fan-funded. She'll be performing at TEDMED 2015 this November, accompanied by her husband Scot Sax. Find out more: <http://tedmed.com/speakers/show?id=526396>

“I am #BreakingThrough the constraints of life as a doctor by pursuing a professional music career while working at an academic medical center and raising a family.”
